Can I Use Our Images?

Yes, to share or report on our articles. Here's how.

Short answer: you can use a DeFi Market Journal image to share, quote or report on the article it comes from, as long as you credit us and link to that article. You can't use it in ads, for resale, or in any way that makes it look like we back you or your project.

We ask because scammers copy news sites' pictures to look official. A credit and a link let readers check the source.

What's fine

- Sharing our article on social media with its preview image.
- Using the image in a news story, review, class or blog post that talks about our article.
- Resizing or cropping it, as long as you don't change what it shows or add words to it.

What's not

- Ads, sponsored posts, token or NFT promotions, and anything you sell.
- Using our name, logo or images so it looks like we endorse you.

- Logos and screenshots of other companies inside our images. Those belong to their owners.

How to credit us

Put this under or beside the image: Image: DeFi Market Journal, linked to the article you took it from. Every image we publish carries the same credit inside the file (IPTC Credit Line and Copyright Notice), so Google Images can show it too.

Which images are made with AI

Many of our cover images are made with AI tools. They never show real people or real company logos. An AI-made image says so inside its file, in the IPTC Digital Source Type field ("Created using Generative AI"), and Google can show that in "About this image."

Questions

FAQ

Can I use a DeFi Market Journal image in my article?

Yes, if your article is about ours or quotes it, and you credit "Image: DeFi Market Journal" with a link to our article. Don't change the image so it says something we didn't.

Can I use your images in an ad or to promote a token?

No. Our images can't be used in ads, token or NFT promotions, paid posts, or anything that suggests we endorse you or your project.

Are your cover images real photos?

Many of our cover images are made with AI tools. Those images say so inside the file, in the IPTC Digital Source Type field, which Google can show in "About this image."

How do I ask about other uses?

Email news@defimarketjournal.com with the image link and how you want to use it. We aim to answer within one business day.
